The history programme at HKU has been designed with a view to give students the widest possible scope to explore and develop their own interests in history. Students can choose from a broad and exciting range of courses representing both general histories as well as the cutting edge in research from our world-leading scholars. The curriculum moves students from the large, comprehensive introductory histories of the first year, through survey histories of geographic areas and countries, to more advanced seminar courses delving deeply on special topics of history. Final-year capstone courses are available to history majors to engage with primary sources and historiography so that students themselves may become historians. Our courses welcome majors, minors and students from other faculties without prerequisites.

Offering Faculty/ Department/ School/Institute: Department of History, School of Humanities
